ABSTRACT

This language-through-literature program is designed to be used as a native language program (language arts/reading readiness), as a second language program, or as a combined native and second language program in early childhood education. Sequentially developed over the year and within each unit, the program is subdivided into 14 units of about two weeks duration each. Each daily lesson is 15 to 20 minutes long and is planned for maximum participation by children and a high degree of individualization. The two volumes include 130 lessons focused around 12 selections of childhood literature, 5 lessons of language arts activities for special occasions such as holidays, and about 15 review lessons. The make-up of each story unit provides an introduction outlining the rationale and aims of the unit; suggestions pertaining to the particular unit, such as illustrations, sound effects, and realia; the text of the story and the text and music of the related songs and games in English, Spanish, and Chinese, with samples in French, German, Japanese, and Portuguese; daily lesson plans providing the structure necessary for language development and maximum freedom for the teacher; a set of slides; and a set of master tapes in English, Spanish, and Chinese. GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The Language-Through-Literature curriculum is for children; for young children no matter what their background - rich, poor, of varying socio-economic, cultural, linguistic or racial background.

Throughout the primary and secondary school years, language learning and subject matter acquisition (content areas) conflict or, at least, compete with each other for the school day's time. The more time is spent on improving the child's language (be it its' first or second language), the less time remains for math, science, history, etc. Only in early childhood is there little or no conflict; language and language development is the subject matter (content area) for the young child. This may be his native tongue, or it may already be a second language.

Language has been defined as the skill of communicating facts, thoughts or ideas. There is no known shortcut to skill learning but practice -- long-time extensive, intensive, and repetitive oral practice. Yet, there is no better chance for success than motivation - - the desire to do something because one wants to; the desire to find out and to know because one wants to.

Can language practice remain intensive yet, at the same time, be motivating in content? How can repetitive practice be presented so that motivation remains high at all times? What is meaningful and of value and significance to young children regardless of language, ethnic, racial, cultural or socio-economic background ?

Stories with literary merit can provide the answer for young children. Children's literature, specifically high quality early childhood literature, with its dual stimulus of meaningful language and superior illustrations, when supported by and correlated with music and song, can captivate all children and motivate them into oral expression and stimulate their intellect. Children's literature can stimulate children to use language for what it really is - - a vehicle for communication not only of facts, but especially of thoughts and ideas, either in oral (spoken) or graphic (printed) form .

A LITERARY LANGUAGE PROGRAM - FOR WHOM?

The Language-Through-Literature Program has been designed, tried and used in a variety of bilingual and, also, monolingual settings. It can be used in any one or any combination of the following situations:

I. As a Native Language Program (Language Arts/Reading Readiness):

- (a) in English for children to whom English is the native tongue.
- (b) in Spanish for children to whom Spanish is the native tongue.
- (c) in Chinese for children to whom Chinese is the native tongue.
- (d) in any other language (French, German, Japanese, Portuguese, etc.) for children to whom this particular language is their native tongue.

II. As a Second Language Program:

- (a) in English for children to whom Spanish is the native tongue (ESL)
- (b) in English for children to whom Chinese is the native tongue (ESL)
- (c) in English for children to whom any other language is their native tongue (ESL)
- (d) in Spanish for children to whom English is the native tongue (SPFL)

(e) in Chinese for children to whom English is the native tongue (CHFL)

(f) in any other language (but English) for children to whom English is the native tongue (FL)

III. As a combined Native Language and Second Language Program:

Depending upon the language and ethnic background of the heterogeneous classroom, the Language-Through-Literature curriculum can be carried on as a "mixed program"; the language emphasis will be shifted in accordance with whatever the target languages of the various groups in the classroom might be.

PROGRAM ORGANIZATION

The Language-Through-Literature curriculum is a language as well as language arts program for early childhood.

1. It is a planned and generally structured program with overall programming for the entire year; yet it retains developmental freedom throughout.
2. It is subdivided into 14 units of about two weeks duration each, sequentially developed over the year, and sequentially developed within each unit, with a basically reoccurring pattern.
3. Each daily lesson is of 15 to 20 minutes duration, and has been planned for maximum children's participation and a high degree of individualization within the conventional classroom setting.
4. Each separate lesson has a definite aim in mind, and arises logically out of previous lessons. It reviews old knowledge, introduces new elements, and lays foundations for the next day's lesson.

One year's curriculum in the Language-Through-Literature Program includes:

1. Approximately 130 lessons focused around 12 selections of childhood literature.
2. Approximately 5 lessons of language/language arts activities planned for special occasions such as holidays, etc.
3. About 15 review lessons of previously presented material.

The make-up of each of the 12 story units is as follows:

1. Introduction outlining the rationale and aims of the unit in terms of:
 - A. Literature
 - B. Language
2. Suggestions pertaining to the particular unit, such as Giant Book illustrations, sound effects, realia, etc.
3. The text of the literary story:
 - A. In English
 - B. In Spanish
 - C. In Chinese
 - D. Samples in French, German, Japanese, Portuguese
4. The text and the music of the story related songs/games:
 - A. In English
 - B. In Spanish
 - C. In Chinese
 - D. Samples in French, German, Japanese, Portuguese.
5. The Daily Lesson Plans averaging ten per unit. These contain minimal instructions in order to meet two needs:
 - A. To provide structure necessary for language and language development;
 - B. To provide maximum freedom for the creative teacher.

The daily lesson plans are presented in English; the language patterns listed, are also stated in English. Corresponding language patterns for Spanish or Chinese (or any other language) can be readily taken from the texts of the literary stories and from the songs in Spanish or Chinese (or any other language), and written into the Daily Lesson Plans as appropriate.

6. Set of Slides for the literary story. These slides should not be used in class since they are not a substitute for the Giant Book illustrations. The slides serve to aid the teacher when making up a Giant Book of her own.
7. Set of Master Tapes for the literary story and story related songs:
 - A. In English
 - B. In Spanish
 - C. In Chinese

Primarily, these tapes serve as a guide for the teacher when preparing herself for a new unit. In addition, the recorded versions of the literary stories and the story related songs can be used as a supplementary (but voluntary) enrichment program for the children.

LITERATURE AND EARLY CHILDHOOD

The Language-Through-Literature curriculum is designed to meet a multiplicity of requirements:

1. As an Early Childhood and/or Primary Program (Pre-K through the Primary Grades) it adheres to sound psychological principles of child development, particularly those governing early childhood. All encounters with learning, and all strategies of teaching, therefore, need to be child centered, and all communications must be meaningful in terms of the children's interest and their emerging stage of intellect.
2. As a Readiness Program, capable of awakening potentials, actualizing beginnings, and laying foundations, it takes advantage of the children's present abilities, their dormant powers, and of their projected future knowledge in such a way as to leave behind a residue of insights and/or knowingness acquired in the learning situations which can become foundations of later learnings.
3. As a Language and/or Language Development Program it makes language, in its best and fullest sense, the focal point and point of departure for the educational experiences of the children. Lingual and bilingual competency and freedom is to be achieved within the context of significant and meaningful (and therefore, motivated) communication. The program tries to adhere to sound linguistic principles of sequencing, progression, gradation, and reinforcement.

In order to maximize the daily 20-minute program, the teaching efforts of the Language-Through-Literature program concentrate on those curricular areas where thoughts, ideas and concepts are paramount, yet where language communication, both passive and active, is also engaged in by the children the most. These are:

1. Creative story-telling
2. Coordinated music and songs.
3. Related interaction play and games.

These early childhood activities, though properly child-oriented, also are largely teacher-directed. Teacher-directed activities are good assurance that language learning and language development will take place under reasonably "controlled" conditions - a must for maximum linguistic achievement during the beginning stages of the language learning process.

Literary Story

Perhaps it is well to discuss at this time some of the qualitative criteria which determined the selections of the individual story units. Since the Language-Through-Literature curriculum should be looked upon as a sample or model for the teacher who will certainly also wish to create his own literary program, qualitative choices will become increasingly important.

Once it has been decided that the high quality literary picture story and its many variations (telling and retelling, dramatizations, role playing, puppetry, musical adaptations, dialogue, choral responses, pantomime, etc.) should form the central language theme of a lesson unit, a survey of early childhood literature then leads to the preselection of materials according to certain criteria - literary, artistic, psychological, educational, and, of course, linguistic. Certain elements should be looked for in the selection of the stories:

1. The story has to be worth telling.
2. The story has to have sound emotional and psychological appeal to children in general - regardless of their ethnic, racial, or socio-economic backgrounds.
3. The story pictures have to be of high artistic quality, yet simple and "telling", since the visual element forms the primary vehicle for comprehension and subsequent language communications. Any detail which may lead to language confusion and distraction must be eliminated.
4. The story has to contain a minimum number of words and a maximum number of consistent pattern repetitions for optimal language learning.

When applying criteria such as these, it soon becomes evident that even the very best of controlled vocabulary stories has to be simplified and patterned further. Illustrations have to be enlarged greatly and even fine pictures have to be devoid of all detail which could in any way confuse the specific lingual communication - yet they have to convey the meaning of the story for the child whose oral comprehension is still in the beginning stages.

To be a literary curriculum of merit, this method of intentional simplification has to be done without sacrifice of the essence of meanings and original intentions of the author and the artist-illustrator.

The literary selections of the Language-Through-Literature program follow a definite developmental sequence both linguistically and psychologically. As language unfolds and expands, so do ideas expand with it. Frequently, a longer story, more difficult in ideational and language concepts, follows a shorter simpler one, in a kind of intentional ebb and flow of intellectual challenge and concentration followed by intellectual rest and recapitulation.

Songs and Games

In the language of early childhood, rhythms, hums and chants are universally interspersed with children's speech. Children's music in forms of simple rhythmic melodies, songs and chants are therefore incorporated into the literary curriculum as natural carriers of language communication. Songs chosen relate closely to the literary selections, in both language and feeling, and they support language learnings through repetitive rhythms that imprint themselves easily on the memory.

The intentional method of simplification without qualitative sacrifices is also applied to songs. Repeated observations of such musical experiences point up a common world of natural rhythm and rhyme shared and enjoyed by all the children, regardless of socio-economic, ethnic, lingual or cultural backgrounds.

Often, a song is especially created to highlight language patterns or vocabulary of the story and in this way comes to reinforce them further. What Little Bear says to Mother Bear, he can also sing to her. For the non-lingual child and for the second language learner, music and songs, rhythm and rhyme provide avenues of expression and opportunities for language reinforcement which are perhaps otherwise unavailable.

Play

Play is the natural and most universal element basic to childhood learning. Repeated observations support the oft noted unifying force of imaginative, purposeful, creative play and its immediate effect on lingual freedom and fluency. Intellectual play, social interaction play, make-believe "realistic" play, dramatic play-games of conceptualization, association, perception, readiness - all these become avenues for motivated learning and thus make possible the kind of natural, active, de facto social and lingual interaction across background and across language barriers, perhaps not available through other avenues. In this manner, play and games, especially selected, support the literary and musical themes, and often are especially created to highlight and reinforce new language learnings or other emerging readiness. Thus, for example, the Giant (5 x 8 inches) Matching Domino Games bring back the many animal "friends" encountered in the literature, and in the Toy Shop Game the same animal toys, previously brought across the mountain by the famous Little Engine of story and song (See Unit 112) can be bought and sold.

Original Story Presentation

The most important, most exciting and most provocative part of the program, however, will always be the original presentation of the literary story. In fact, the success of the original story presentation may well determine the learning success of the entire literary unit, perhaps of the entire curriculum. It is the original story presentation which forms the basis for motivation to communicate; it is the take off point for all future learnings. The teacher, and experienced story teller, will wish to follow a few basic rules:

1. The original story presentation must be TOLD AND NOT READ.

The simple story text should be memorized and then presented orally in the true tradition of the story teller who can keep his audience spellbound by the quality of his presentation. (In addition to the motivation created by a high-quality presentation, memorization is also the only assurance that the carefully selected language patterns are used with no deviations, and therefore no confusion for the language learner).

The quality of the initial story presentation can determine the success of the entire program.

2. The successful story-teller-teacher will place the children so that the classroom atmosphere is conducive to a successful literary story experience. An intimate setting should prevail, perhaps best by seating the children on the floor in a semi-circle around the teacher - near enough to give a feeling of intimacy, yet sufficiently spaced apart to allow children to get up and interact with the story if the original presentation calls for such activity.
3. The Giant Book illustrations (probably 14 x 17 inches in size) should be so placed and used that they are easily seen by all children. Since the Giant Book illustrations serve the dual objective of conveying the literary as well as the language (linguistic) meaning of the story, no "miss" on clear visibility can be tolerated. The use of an easel is suggested.

Language Readiness and the Multisensory Approach

Multisensory perception is the central and unifying factor to all childhood learning. Throughout the program, focus on all the senses is directed at giving meaning to language and culture, and to implement this approach, multisensory tools are used extensively. These involve not only auditory and visual perceptions but also the other perceptual faculties of touch and even taste and smell, thus providing for a multiplicity of experiences on a variety of levels and across subject matter lines. As a result, the emerging developmental stages of early childhood are brought into active interplay with specific learning situations, as they present themselves in the development of bilingual readiness and its concomitant lingual readiness.

For the non-lingual child and for those learning a second language, identification through multisensory approaches provides special opportunities for total comprehension and offers alternate avenues of learning perhaps otherwise unavailable. As a result, all children, therefore come to experience the vitality of language as a means of communication and as an extension of the senses, for relaying ideas, feelings, thoughts, concepts, and facts.

In addition, the multisensory approach also helps to throw light on readiness in general, the interrelatedness of readiness facets, and their relationship to the bilingual factor, in what may perhaps best be termed multiple readiness. Along with bilingual readiness, the children are exposed to readiness experiences in literature including dramatics, poetry, and oral composition; music, both pre-instrumental and vocal; the full range of the sciences; mathematics; art, art appreciation and color; interpretative, creative and folk dance; and particularly, pre-reading, i. e. reading readiness leading to beginning reading.

Experience points out that the programmed two-week units arising out of each original literary selection, be planned in breadth and depth to lead to any and all areas of subject matter readiness, yet be developed naturally, from a motivated and motivating, child-oriented point of view. In fact, when the multisensory approach remains central, when the child's earnest need for creative play is respected, when the awareness of emerging stages is consciously tied to de facto learning situations, then the program can lay foundations for any subject matter - in addition to language, both native and foreign - as it presents itself through readiness in Pre-Kindergarten, Kindergarten and beginning instruction in Grade 1, and as it then reappears throughout the grades.

Language, Early Childhood and Visuals

In the Language-Through-Literature curriculum visuals naturally play a central and unifying role. It has been pointed out previously that the faithful enlargements of the picture book illustrations (14 x 18 inches) must convey the meaning of the literary story, but at the same time they must also fill their function as a vehicle for language (linguistic) communication in those instances where oral comprehension is yet limited. Thus, the Giant Book illustrations serve as central points of departure and return for every bilingual story theme:

The children can step up to (and, in a way, into) the covers of the Giant Book to Pat the Bunny with Paul and Judy, to create footprints in the snow with Peter on a Snowy Day, to look for a horse with Indian Two-Feet, to Feed The Animals with Zookeeper Bill, to scale the Climbing Tree with Bobby and Betsy, to help The Little Engine That Could pull the toy train across the mountain, to feel the wind as Down Come The Leaves, to plant and water The Carrot Seed, to discover the bear upstairs when Nobody Listens to Andrew,

to hear the world with Muffin in The Noisy Book, to put on hat, coat and snow pants with Little Bear, and to ask what is inside the egg with Bunny in The Golden Egg Book.

There should be continued interaction between the children and the visuals, and vice versa, and in contrast to the common practice of using an audio-visual device such as a chart or a film for "one-way only" communication (from the teacher or the tool to the pupils, with the children being the passive recipients of information), the Language-Through-Literature program uses all tools as active and interacting components.

Thus, the Giant Book illustrations become the focal point for conveying all comprehension of unknown concepts and new speech patterns.
Once basic comprehension has been established, the simple artistic illustrations become the stimuli to which the children respond in anticipated language patterns. The visuals take on a life of their own, cutting across language and other barriers in a shared world of make-believe, fantasy, and childhood imagination.

The Connection

In the Language-Through-Literature program, children's literature, supported by and expanded through children's pictures, children's music and children's play, becomes the vehicle for a motivated oral language curriculum, thus also laying foundations for subsequent motivated acquisition of written language of literary consequence.

"For at least twenty centuries, the best literature produced in the western world was presented orally to audiences of many ages and social levels. And if it is true that great audiences produce great artists, then the audiences of such literature must have penetrated its meaning and been sensitive to its literary merit; there must have been some route of interchange of inspiration continually open between writers and audiences. From this it does not follow that children who as yet do not read should be insensible to the attractions of fine literature when it is appropriate to their level of intellect, imagination and rhythmic sense. Before a child is able to read, before he is able to cope with the only partially systematic English graphic system, he has the need to come in contact with literature: if he cannot read, he can surely be read to" (Curriculum for English, Grade 1, University of Nebraska)

Since the Language -Through-Literature curriculum is programmed sequentially and entirely around high-quality children's literature, the children are exposed all throughout, and simultaneously with their language related activities, to a complete and pre-planned curriculum

Education Technology

Beginning Reading

in children's literature for the early childhood years. Readiness for literature in general, and especially for high quality literature, is thus given recognition and anchorage at the very same time that readiness for communication, both bilingual and lingual is being fostered. In this way, children in their earliest school years are given a literary foundation - stemming from the oral tradition, and offered in a bilingual 'milieu' - to serve them as a link to future literature studies, whether these be in English Literature, Foreign Language Literature, or both, or orally or graphic.

Whether the aim and purpose of such a curriculum and approach is then variously for the enrichment and stimulation of intellectually or creatively gifted children, or as a bridge for culturally deprived or disadvantaged children, or for English-speaking pupils learning a foreign language, or for non-English speakers learning English; or for a combination of some or of all of these, is not really of singular or prime importance.

At this point, perhaps the question that remains to be considered is:

What is the line of connection between early childhood development, early childhood literature, and early childhood language learning?

Since repetition is close to the root of the human life experience, it is not surprising to find that young children, who are instinctively close to life forces, use repetition also as their own instinctive technique for learning in early childhood; literature, particularly early childhood literature (which includes folk tales), also employs repetition as a literary device highly appealing to children; and finally, repetition reappears once again in language as the essential element of skill acquisition.

Let us, therefore, now examine language learning in its relationship to early childhood and to early childhood literature - a relationship upon which the approach, method, and techniques of the Language-Through-Literature curriculum are built.

REPETITION

A CONNECTING LEARNING LINK

LANGUAGE AND EARLY CHILDHOOD LITERATURE

Some basic principles underlying early childhood education are strikingly similar to modern methods of language teaching:

1. Young children thrive on repetition, imitation, and mimicry.
2. Young children learn in short frames.

Language, be it English or any other, be it a child's "first" (so called native) or "second" language, it also is best learned in this way.

Sequential Steps:

In the Language-Through-Literature program the functional use of communication is accomplished through a series of sequential steps leading from:

1. Receptive Responses (listening and listening/comprehension to
2. Active Responses (bodily and/or lingual participation).

In each unit, the children are first exposed to audio stimuli - i. e. the live presentation - supported by visual stimuli. Listening and listening/comprehension are the primary goals at that point. Once basic comprehension has been established, the children responded actively either in a non-verbal manner through object or bodily movements, or in a verbal manner through audio lingual utterances. The active responses are, at first, imitative (repetition, mimicry) and eventually creative (replies, dramatizations, etc.), usually moving from choral responses to individual ones. To rephrase it in outline form, the sequence of communication may be shown as follows:

(I) Receptive Responses

- (A) Aural and Visual
- (B) Comprehension

(II) Active Responses

(A) Non-verbal Responses

(1) Imitative Responses

- (a) Object Manipulation
- (b) Bodily Movements

(2) Creative Responses

- (a) Object Manipulation
- (b) Bodily Movements

(B) Verbal Responses

- (1) Imitative Responses
- (2) Creative Responses

When applied to every literary two week unit, the progression of language communication from the unknown to the known (i. e. from hearing to listening to understanding, to acting, to speaking) usually follows a series of sequentially planned steps: (1) story telling, (2) story enactment, and (3) story expansions.

Within these three steps, bilingual communication of the literary curriculum is accomplished by a series of variations on the themes, presented in various combinations, such as:

(1) Story telling and retelling - with book illustrations;

with recordings;
with music and songs;
with comprehension checks;
with object manipulations;
with puppets;
with feltboard manipulations;
with choral responses;
with child-book interactions;
with child-song interactions etc.

(2) Story enactment and re-enactment - through pantomime;

through puppets;
through role playing;
through musical adaptations;
through dialogue;
through first person transpositions;
through dramatizations, etc.

(3) Story expansions and theme transfers -

through songs;
through dance;
through play;
through games;
through poems and chants;
through recordings, etc.

Since all language learning requires repetitive oral practice, one or two-day reviews of the two week units should be interspersed throughout; specific story themes should be brought back especially when requested by the children.

The Frame Work

All considerations governing language communication of a literary curriculum are fitted into the Language-Through-Literature Program through the DAILY LESSON PLAN. It provides the teacher with the overall structure and suggested techniques for each day's lesson. In keeping with the rationale of new learning arising out of and following from known elements, each lesson presents first some familiar, then new material, and concludes with familiarity once again. The DAILY LESSON PLAN therefore consists of three lesson parts:

1. Warmup Activity - usually using previously introduced material and a quick language pattern review.
2. Center-of-Interest Activity - using a new story theme or a new variation of the theme, including a new level or new step in language and literary development.
3. Closing Activity - using summary and familiar material.

In addition, the DAILY LESSON PLAN contains three main information columns pertaining to:

1. Audio-Visual Materials such as the Giant Book, musical instruments, toy objects, puppets, tape recorder, etc.

2. Main Language Patterns as specific terminal goals of the day's lesson.

3. Teaching Suggestions as to method, techniques, or approach.

Repetitive Practice and Motivation

In order to anchor specific language patterns, it is important that the children engage daily in some repetitive practices. Whereas motivation in conventional linguistic pattern practice is often missing, commands to "open the door" for Little Bear or "put on the hat" for him, or to "walk" like Indian Two Feet or like Peter on a Snowy Day, or to "jump", "run", "fly" like a rabbit, horse, bird, will evoke past story situations and make all commands and respective responses meaningful. This also means that in spite of the program's basic dependence on oral communication, one can still reasonably expect a specific stimulus to elicit a specific response or a certain limited range of responses, even during the unexpected give-and-take of a dialogue situation. Here, as in all teacher-pupil exchanges of the Language-Through-Literature Program the teacher should stimulate or cue each child in whatever the target language, without exerting any pressure. The children should be encouraged to participate actively according to their abilities. This is particularly important for the withdrawn and non-lingual child of any background who needs a choice of acceptable non-verbal responses; and perhaps for all the English speaking children learning a foreign language, and/or many children perfecting their own language: as their minds and bodies naturally race ahead of their speech, "actions speak louder than words", i.e. an action-response often preceeds and/or accompanies the verbal one, in a natural sequence from listening-comprehension to action and, finally, to verbalization. Thus a child's participation sometimes takes the form of a bodily response, sometimes interaction with objects, sometimes mimicry and imitation in the target language, sometimes a choral response, sometimes a musical response, and sometimes a creative response in the native or target language, or a combination of any of these. In such a manner, all children can feel that any language can communicate ideas, thoughts, information, and feelings, in any number of ways.

Because repetition and recall are essential elements for successful acquisition of language skills and, when properly motivating, are also vital characteristics of a successful early childhood program, the Language-Through-Literature Program is so designed that the language patterns as well as the literary story characters, i.e. the children's story "friends", reappear again and again, both horizontally within the daily lesson and the two week unit, and also vertically across the units throughout the entire year's program. In this manner, the linguistic repetition and recall necessary for language reinforcement, become de facto meaningful communication (in addition to remaining a literary experience also), rather than artificially created learning material structured for limited purposes and supported by insufficient motivation.

Thus, for example, a language item like "can touch" or "can walk" reappears daily, many times, within one specific literary unit, in a variety of forms, and is used and manipulated by the children easily a hundred times throughout the two weeks developmental sequence; in addition, the same item reappears, for example, in two subsequent literary story units, again with the same high frequency. Since each story is regularly expanded by two or three songs, each of these central language items reappears several times in each of the supportive songs. (See Chart). By its very nature, a song once introduced, becomes a self-sustaining independent tool for repetitive yet motivated language practice because of its powerful impact through rhythm and melody, making memorization and recall easy.

Similarly, and supporting the repetitively reappearing language patterns, the literary animal characters also reappear sequentially and repetitively in both story and song. The "bear" for example, in addition to his daily presence within the two week story unit, reappears in six of the thirteen story units, and in five songs; the "rabbit" reappears in four of the thirteen story units, and in six songs and games, while the "bird" reappears in four of the units and in two of the songs and games. (See Chart)

Literature and the Conventional Language Items

While literary oriented, the Language-Through-Literature Program also introduces all of the conventional groups of items usually covered in beginning language instructions (and language arts programs as well) such as greetings, parts of the body, articles of clothing, colors, foods, family members, numbers, animals, etc. (See Chart)

Parts of Body: Aural comprehension and lingual production are constantly yet naturally practiced as Paul and Judy and Muffin, to refer to just two stories, introduce the children in natural language patterns to eyes, ears, face, hair, skin, and the accompanying songs reinforce and expand these and related items and patterns further to other parts of the body - head, foot, hand, nose, etc.

Clothing: Similarly, language patterns pertaining to articles of clothing that appear in Little Bear - hat coat, snow pants - are reinforced and further expanded through the actual dressing and undressing of a toy bear, and through the children's own additional clothing - gloves, shoes, etc.

Food: Introduction of food items such as carrots, apples, honey, fish, bread, meat, water, milk, cheese, eggs, throughout various stories, is again reinforced and expanded when the children Feed

The Animals in the Zoo story, then with toy foods and toy animals, and finally in actuality, perhaps, through a class trip to the Zoo.

Colors are first introduced in the fall through the story theme of falling leaves, changing from green to red, yellow, and brown; at Halloween, black and orange, naturally, are brought in, and Christmas and winter, supported by three story themes, reviews all these colors, adding the missing blue along with winter white. Later on, Easter time and a related story theme set the scene for additional audio-lingual practice of old and new color language patterns, supported by actual color mixing activities - that is, pink out of white and red, purple out of red and blue, while painting Easter eggs.

Often the teacher can combine two or more groupings, such as clothing and color, food and color (such as Easter eggs), and even parts of the body and color - such as in the related Easter song "Pink ears are listening; Pink eyes watch out; Who is that peeking? Is there any doubt?" , referring of course to the Easter Rabbit with his basket of colored eggs.

Motor activities such as to run, jump, ride, climb (up and/or down), put on, take off, stop, go, go on, walk, paint, sing, dance, play (the drum, for example), touch - these activities in their many different forms are woven throughout the story theme units and thus provide repeated opportunities for simultaneous acquisition of language and concept formation.

In this manner, children's literature - in addition to its own inherent values - rather than an artificially formulated teaching structure, teaches and practices the skills of language, native as well as second.

Section Summary:

The mastery of skills can thus be fused to meaningful language usage, while the young child's universal love of motivated repetition is utilized as a natural teaching device. This also means that language learning is inseparably linked to - not separated from - thought communication, and that both the language and thought patterns are of a high order of quality and that they remain at all times in the service of communication of content of significance.

As a result, the Language-Through-Literature curriculum gives language learning its natural place, not as an end in itself, but as a powerful vehicle of communication within the spiral and cumulative framework of school instruction.

Finally, it needs to be restated that this curriculum should be looked at by the teacher not just as a day-to-day program to be followed rigidly, but rather as just one example, one technique on how to combine the goals of a literature program with the goals of language learning and language development. Eventually, the teacher will wish to select from the wealth of high-quality early childhood literature to create similar programs of her own.

PROGRAM EXPANSION THROUGH TECHNOLOGY

Ever since the advent of the language laboratory as a valuable instructional tool some twenty years ago, it had been assumed that the systematic use of electronic instrumentation was limited to the older student. Until only recently, it was believed that for a variety of reasons, neither the teacher nor the pupils in early grades could really benefit from microphones, earphones, tapes, etc. However, observations of the use of electronic tools in the Bilingual Readiness and in many other projects, have dispelled any such assumptions.

Today, electronic tools suitable to the children's age, can and should be used as sensory extensions. Listening stations can incorporate cassette recorders, headphones and cartridge tapes with recorded versions of the bilingual literary stories and the supporting songs. These cartridge tapes should be made available to the children shortly after the live presentations of the two weeks theme unit; they will bring back to the children - - as they group around a table or lay on a mat - - language experiences in a specific content which would otherwise be difficult to "recall" in the classroom at will. This makes possible individual recollection (and reinforcement) according to spontaneous individual desire and need without imposing the conformity or time delay of a teacher-directed review.

Education Technology provides privacy and concentration.

Pre-recorded versions of the stories, sound effects, songs and rhythms should be used as planned support and/or extensions of the program activities in two ways:

- 1. As planned supports of the ongoing program activities.

The applicable situations are referred to and outlined in the daily lesson plans.

- 2. As extensions, either scheduled or on a voluntary basis, outside the daily Language-Through-Literature class activity. It is suggested that taped versions of the stories and songs be made available to the children for additional voluntary recall.

The children will be eager to use this form of "repetition" of the program, and often they will ask for it as the first spontaneous activity upon arrival in school in the morning.

Here, the children have an opportunity to relive the various experiences of the Language-Through-Literature program in privacy. They will be attentive for extended periods of time in a manner of relaxed participation.

It is suggested that the media specialist should be consulted and his assistance requested since many opportunities exist to expand and enrich the Language-Through-Literature program through technology. Most schools today have a media (audio-visual) specialist on their staff, and if the school itself does not have such a staff person, he is certainly available from the central school system. Teachers will find that the media specialist assists willingly and is eager to help.

While it is not new to record children's voices, it should be remembered that the preclusion of errors when recording children can be important motivational and psychologically constructive strategy. Children will welcome opportunities for recording favorite stories and songs through techniques of "I say a line- then you say the same line after me" which makes possible the kind of good recordings that enhance the children's image to themselves, to their classmates and to their parents and their teachers.

All technological instrumentation should be so arranged that the children themselves can handle most of the technical function. Today's five and six year-olds are already familiar with such technical communication tools as microphones, headphones, walkie-talkies, and tape recorders; and those children who have not handled such tools previously, will demonstrate a high degree of psychological and technical readiness to do so. Technical readiness today exists alongside other forms in much the same manner as bilingual readiness exists along reading readiness, numbers readiness, etc.

As electronic tools are used systematically and appropriately, past assumptions regarding the limited attention span of young children will have to be revised. Repeated observations have shown that a well programmed electronic presentation of superior quality and of unquestionable motivation, significantly increases the children's attention span well beyond expectations. Apparently, the kind and quality of children's attention depends largely on situational factors; therefore, when the normal and customary classroom disturbances, distractions and interruptions are eliminated through electronic technology (headphones), the children's natural curiosity will focus exclusively on the specifically selected learning items, and the attention span will increase.

Properly applied technological instrumentation will soon point to the fact that children are ready and indeed have a need for individual learning and self-study. When a child is given the opportunity to relive, at his own volition, and at his own time, and in the privacy of the electronic communication system, some of the group experiences of the classroom, then he immerses himself imaginatively once again into the "reality" of the learning experience of the Language-Through-Literature program. Because repetition and mimicry - fundamental requirements for all skill learning at any age level - are also the natural and welcome learning avenues in early childhood, a well programmed electronic presentation of superior quality can be a powerful motivation for individual self-study and reinforcement for the very young child.

Education technology extends attention span.

Another interesting phenomenon, and confirmed repeatedly, is the fact that in-grouping ceases completely around the electronic listening station. While children, in play or at work, often choose close friends to share a work table, and in this manner tend to stay group-bound, the individual and private aspects of the headphones apparently need no other companionship but the recorded "living" voice. Thus, the children's spontaneous reach for headphones will naturally lead to entirely mixed groupings of children from all backgrounds.

Teachers today are well aware of their new role and the challenging task, and of their new relationship to the world of Education Technology; being aware of these new opportunities and responsibilities, the teacher should receive adequate help and training in order to be able to take fullest advantage of what can be done. Close rapport between the technologist and the educator is in order.

SOME EXTRA DO'S AND DON'TS

(1) DON'T RUSH!

The teacher should pace the speed of the Language-Through-Literature Program in such a manner that it meets the needs of the children. Sometimes a faster pace is called for for one group, while a slower, more leisurely pace is more appropriate for another group of children.

Generally, however, it is suggested that the teacher should not rush through the program because:

1. Young children want repetition. They love and thrive on repetition of a good story and the program connected with it.
2. Successful acquisition of language demands a great deal of repetition.

It is obviously important that motivation is maintained high and this is accomplished through variations of the various repetitions as indicated in the Daily Lesson Plans.

(2) FELT BOARD ACTIVITIES

Felt board cut-outs should be prepared for every unit. This activity gives still an additional dimension to the Language-Through-Literature program. It is in line with the idea that children like repetition when presented through "variations. "

The felt board cut-outs should represent the story characters and/or the toys as they appear in every unit.

(3) HOW TO MAKE A GIANT BOOK

As has been stated previously, the quality of the original story presentation will determine the success or failure of the unit and perhaps of the entire program. No efforts should be spared to make it as good and as successful as possible.

Since the first presentation of the literary story is told in a language which the children either do not yet comprehend at all, or which they comprehend only partially (but which they certainly do not yet master) the picture illustrations must convey successfully the meaning of the oral presentation to the children.

Not only must the illustrations be of high artistic quality, but they must be simple and telling, and at the same time they must be void of any detail which may lead to language confusion and/or distraction for the learner.

A set of slides has been provided so that the teacher may prepare her own Giant Book illustration if she chooses to use the literary story units which are incorporated in this curriculum as samples. Each slide should be enlarged so that it fits on a format of about 14" x 17". It can then be traced with pencil or directly with felt pen, and colored in later on.

If the teacher wishes to prepare her own literary units, it is suggested that the audio-visual department of the school assist her in making appropriate enlargements directly or indirectly from the literary book itself. This may be accomplished either with an opaque projector, or by first making a pencil copy of the picture on transparent paper, and then enlarging it by means of an overhead projector.

It is suggested that oak tag be used for these Giant Books since they will be handled a great deal by the children throughout the year.

Unit 100

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 100: GETTING ACQUAINTED

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT:

None

OBJECTIVES:

1. To comprehend and produce the basic language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 100-1 through 100-8).
2. To participate in the activities both through listening/comprehension and oral responses.
3. To be able to sing the story songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS:

This first "Getting Acquainted" Unit should accomplish exactly what its title conveys. Children should become acquainted with the teacher, with their new puppet friends (Pancho and Ramona) and especially with each other.

Since Pancho and Ramona (the puppets) will reappear through the entire Language-Through-Literature curriculum, it is important that they be introduced to the children as "their" friends. The teacher who is not completely familiar with puppet techniques, should request from the school system Curriculum Guides on Early Childhood or reference books which provide detailed suggestions.

It is hoped that the introductory Getting Acquainted Unit will assist the teacher in familiarizing the children with such routine activities as roll call, good morning and good-bye practices, contacts with other children, the use of name tags, etc.

OPENING: New Song S-101

Unit 100-1

Teacher introduces GOOD MORNING SONG, as per copy.

- A. Teacher sings the song to the class with instrument accompaniment if possible (for example: guitar), as with all other songs.
- B. Teacher sings the song again and asks children to join in humming it with her (demonstrates briefly).
- C. Teacher sings song again, this time line by line, letting children repeat each line after her.
- D. Children and class now sing song together (do not overteach).

II. ACTIVITY: GETTING ACQUAINTED Puppet P-1

Purpose: Teacher establishes contact with class and with each child individually. Teacher establishes contact with puppet, and between class and puppet.

- A. Teacher greets class: GOOD MORNING, CHILDREN
- B. Teacher (quickly puts on puppet and turns to puppet as she addresses class) introduces Pancho: LOOK! HERE IS A NEW FRIEND. Teacher says, pointing to self and speaking directly to puppet: I AM MRS. X. Puppet points to self, says: I AM PANCHO
Teacher: GOOD MORNING, PANCHO
Pancho: GOOD MORNING, MRS. X
Puppet turns to children and says: GOOD MORNING, CHILDREN.
Teacher prompts children to respond: GOOD MORNING, PANCHO
Teacher(hides puppet behind her back) addresses herself to the children: GOOD MORNING, CHILDREN. Teacher points to self with free hand, elicits children's response: GOOD MORNING, MRS. X
- C. Teacher then brings out puppet, goes with puppet to individual child saying: I AM PANCHO (with puppet pointing to self) and then immediately puppet points to individual child, eliciting the response: I AM X (child's name). Now teacher carefully chooses the most responsive child to serve as a model for the others. Teacher may prompt child softly. (Puppet does not prompt child). Pancho immediately goes to next child and says, I AM PANCHO, pointing to self, immediately then pointing to child eliciting response from the child, I AM X (Rosita, Maria, etc.) Teacher may prompt child to answer Pancho.

Good morning!
I am _____
Good bye!

A.V. and supplementary

S-102 song

Pancho addresses himself to all children if possible, one after the other. Children who do not participate at this point should be gently by-passed but should be invited to respond again after they have heard other children.

- D. (The original re-enactment between puppet and teacher may be evoked again as model, as necessary. I.E. Puppet turns to teacher and says: I AM PANCHO, pointing to self. Teacher says to puppet: I AM MRS. X, pointing to self.)

III. CLOSING:

New Song S-102

Good-bye song.

Teacher introduces song by singing it as a closing. Sings it again, inviting the children to join her with humming only. No further teaching of the song at this time. Before leaving, teacher says GOOD-BYE, CHILDREN, elicits from class GOOD-BYE, MRS. X. Pancho says: GOOD-BYE, CHILDREN, elicits from class: GOOD-BYE, PANCHO. Pancho: GOOD-BYE, GOOD-BYE, GOOD-BYE!

OPENING:S101 Song

Teacher sings Good Morning Song. Lets class listen or hum along. Repeats song, inviting children so sing along. The third time teacher teaches song line by line, as previous day.

II. ACTIVITY: GETTING ACQUAINTEDPuppet P-1

A. Purpose: Reinforce contact with class and individual children. Establish routine. Activity should be the same as previous day, using the same patterns and the same actions as previous day, with the following additions: Teacher opens activity: GUESS WHO IS HERE TODAY. Teacher "hides" Pancho puppet behind back, not too well, so children can partially see it. Teacher emphasizes the word, GUESS --- elicits choral response: PANCHO! Teacher: IT'S, IT'S PANCHO. Addresses class: IT'S PANCHO. Elicits choral response: IT'S PANCHO. Teacher: YES, IT'S PANCHO, OUR NEW FRIEND. Puppet and teacher then re-enact same activities as previous day, using same patterns. Puppet and class re-enact same activities as previous day, using same patterns.

B. Additional activities: Teacher and puppet: HOW ARE YOU, PANCHO? Pancho: I AM FINE, MRS. X, AND YOU? Teacher: FINE, THANK YOU, PANCHO. Pancho turns to class: HOW ARE YOU, CHILDREN? Eliciting choral response: FINE, THANK YOU, PANCHO.

C. Pancho now reenacts individual question-and-answer type responses, same as previous day, using the pattern: (with all children, if possible) HOW ARE YOU, X? And eliciting each child's response: FINE, THANK YOU, PANCHO, or, simply, FINE, THANK YOU.

III. CLOSINGGood-bye Song S-102

A. Teacher sings good-bye song, first along, encouraging the children to hum it, then teaching the phrase that says: GOOD BYE, MY LITTLE CHILDREN, GOOD-BYE, GOOD BYE, GOOD BYE.

B. Same as previous day: Teacher to class: GOOD BYE, CHILDREN. Class: GOOD BYE, MRS. X. Pancho (to class): GOOD BYE, CHILDREN. Pancho elicits response from class: GOOD BYE, PANCHO. Pancho: GOOD BYE, GOOD BYE, GOOD BYE!

MAIN PATTERNS

How are you?
How are you _____?
Fine, thank you.
Good-bye!

OPENING:-Song S101

Teacher sings Good Morning Song. Children listen and hum the first time; second time they sing along. Teacher listens for weaknesses, without interrupting children. Teacher may wish to teach song, line by line, once more.

II. ACTIVITY: GETTING ACQUAINTED

- A. Teacher continues contact with class and individually, as before. Teacher morning greeting and class response. Teacher follows by enacting morning greeting with individual children. Children who are not ready to respond should be gently by-passed without making them feel that they have failed, but should be always invited to respond again after hearing other children.
- B. Introduction, as previous day. Teacher: GUESS WHO IS HERE AGAIN? --hiding Pancho behind back, but this time hiding him properly. Elicits children's response: PANCHITO. IT'S PANCHITO. Teacher: YES, IT'S PANCHITO, AGAIN. Pancho and teacher review dialogue with class and individual children, using all the patterns of the previous two days.

Addition for today is new puppet, Ramona.

- C. Teacher: AND LOOK, HERE IS A NEW FRIEND. Teacher puts on girl puppet without naming her and repeats same action in lesson 1 with Pancho, to self saying, I AM MRS. X, addressing herself to puppet, (i.e. pointing) Girl puppet, pointing to self: I AM RAMONA.
- D. In addition: Teacher now points to Ramona and says; YOU ARE RAMONA. Ramona points to self and says; I AM PANCHITA, then quickly points to teacher and says: YOU ARE MRS. X. Ramona now turns to individual children in class and repeats the procedure as with Pancho using, however, the I AM, YOU ARE patterns for today. Teacher reintroduces Pancho. Pancho and Ramona go through same pattern of I AM, YOU ARE between each other. Ramona then turns to individual children and repeats new patterns with them. Elicit I AM X, YOU ARE RAMONA response from every child, if possible. Teacher puts puppet behind her back, and using her other free hand, repeats patterns: I AM MRS. X, YOU ARE MRS. X.

MAIN PATTERNS

I am _____.
You are _____.
I am _____, you are _____.

E. Teacher calls on two children to re-enact same pattern, in new version:

Child A, pointing to self: I AM A
Child B, pointing to A: YOU ARE A
Child B, pointing to self: I AM B
Child A, pointing to B: YOU ARE B

III. CLOSING

Sing good bye song with children humming except the part they learned the previous day. Re-teach again the good-bye part, so children can sing along that part clearly.

Reinforce good bye by using puppets, Pancho: GOOD BYE, CHILDREN
Children: GOOD BYE PANCHITO
Repeat same with Ramona.

Reinforce phrase: UNTIL TOMORROW (remember, it appears in good--bye song.)

Pancho: UNTIL TOMORROW, CHILDREN
Children: UNTIL TOMORROW, PANCHITO
The same with Ramona. The same with teacher.

(Instruct classroom teacher NOT to issue name tags for next day. Prepare two name tags for puppets for following day.)

OPENING:Song S-101

Good morning song. Class joins in the first time. Repeated two times.

- Pattern review, choral and individual responses of past three lessons
1. GOOD MORNING, CHILDREN etc. and responses.
 2. HOW ARE YOU, CHILDREN etc. and responses.
 3. I AM -- YOU ARE etc. and responses.

Teacher notes weaknesses to reinforce in next few lessons.

II. ACTIVITY: GETTING ACQUAINTED; NAME TAGS AND ROLL CALL P-1, P-2

Purpose: Further personalizing. Classroom teacher had been instructed the previous days not to issue name tags to children, but have them ready on a table or on a tray. Two small name tags should be prepared in advance and placed on top of the children's name tags, one for each puppet, one reading: "Pancho" and one reading "Ramona," with string attached.

Teacher: (hiding puppets) GUESS WHO IS HERE TODAY, AGAIN.
Elicits answer from class (Pancho).

Teacher: YES, PANCHO. IT'S PANCHO (elicits choral repetition.)

Teacher: GUESS WHO ELSE IS HERE TODAY, AGAIN.

Class answers (Ramona)

Teacher: YES, RAMONA. IT'S RAMONA (elicits choral repetition.)

Teacher (showing puppet): PANCHO IS HERE.

Elicits choral response from class: PANCHO IS HERE

Teacher: RAMONA IS HERE.

Elicits same response from class.

Puppets' good morning greetings to children, first P-1 then P-2, eliciting choral response from class.

Name tags are on table in front of class.

Pancho: LOOK, CHILDREN. Pancho picks out name tag. Reads slowly: RAMONA.

Ramona responds: I AM HERE.

Pancho repeats: RAMONA IS HERE--COME HERE, RAMONA. Pancho puts tag on Ramona.

Ramona says: I AM RAMONA. THANK YOU.

Pancho now repeats this ceremony with each child. That is, Pancho picks out card name tag. Reads carefully child's name "X" (for example, MARIA).

Teacher helps child respond to this the same way as Ramona responded, by saying I AM HERE. Puppet does not prompt child. Only teacher can prompt child in softer voice.

MAIN PATTERNS

_____ is here.
I am here.

A.V. and supplementary

song S-101
P-1, P-2 puppets
song S-102

Pancho repeats: X IS HERE. COME HERE, X.

Child comes up, is handed his name tag, puts it on and repeats: I AM X, THANK YOU. This is repeated, if possible, with every child in the class. The regular classroom teacher should mark down children who are absent so that they could act it out the next day. When a card is called of a child who is absent, puppet reads the name carefully and when there is no response the teacher responds: X IS NOT HERE.

Pancho repeats: X IS NOT HERE. Teacher then leads class into choral repetition: X IS NOT HERE. Teacher reinforces: X IS NOT HERE TODAY. Class repeats.

The patterns for the day are the same as in the previous lessons, with particular reinforcement on the I AM and THANK YOU plus new patterns.

III. CLOSING:

Song S-102

Good bye song. (Partial dramatization)

A. Teacher sings good-bye song with emphasis on the GOOD BYE LINE in which children join..

B. Teacher now acts out the word EMBRACE with several children. That is, she demonstrates the meaning of the word. Teacher calls child's name, "X". Elicits the response: "I AM HERE. Teacher says: COME HERE, X and then says A WARM EMBRACE I LEAVE YOU, demonstrating with an embrace of the child. She then calls another child, COME HERE, X and goes through the same demonstration with as many children as time allows. In case it is impossible to do this with all children, the teacher notes down the children who are to go through this part of the lesson the next day.

Teacher: GOODBYE, CHILDREN. Class response.

Teacher: UNTIL TOMORROW. Class response.

(Instruct classroom teacher not to distribute name tags next day)

OPENING: Song S-101

Children and teacher sing Good-morning song together. The second time teacher subdues voice so that children sing largely alone, the teacher cupping her ear to help the children realize that they are to sing alone. Teacher listens to the level of knowledge of song. (She may then teach it further line by line or otherwise reinforce it).

A review of patterns up to now, lessons 1-4 with choral responses plus several individual responses on each item, going around the room, so that each child has had a chance to make an individual response to at least one of the language patterns.

II. ACTIVITY: GETTING ACQUAINTED; ROLL-CALL WITH NAME TAGS AS PREVIOUS DAY

Essentially same activity as in lesson 4. Teacher uses exactly the same pattern as in lesson 4 but adds additional patterns (following "x is not here") as follows:

X IS ABSENT
X IS HOME

Teacher elicits choral responses.

The word HOME can be illustrated by a quick sketch of typical house on the blackboard or at the easel. If this is not possible it may simply be supplied in the native language by the native teacher present.

Teacher makes sure that those children who did not receive their name tags individually the day before receive them today in the same manner as for others done previously.

III. CLOSING: Good bye Song S-102

Good-bye song, with emphasis on the line A WARM EMBRACE I LEAVE YOU, again acting this out with several children, using same dialogue pattern. Teacher selects children with whom she did not do this previously.

Puppets - class exchange greetings.

GOOD BYE

UNTIL TOMORROW!

(Give name tags for next day's game.)

OPENING:Song S-101

Good Morning song. Teacher sings it once with class, then attempts to have class sing it alone.

Teacher: GUESS WHO IS HERE? (Pancho) as before.

A quick review of opening patterns GOOD-MORNING--HOW ARE YOU?--I AM; YOU ARE --I AM HERE, etc.

II. ACTIVITY: NAME READING GAMEPuppets 1-2, name tags

Again children do not have name tags on. Teacher spreads out three name tags on the floor so that all three names are visible.

Pancho picks out name tag, and reads name. First name should be RAMONA so that model is established. Pancho reads: RAMONA, and replaces name tag on the floor.

Pancho: COME HERE, RAMONA, SHOW ME YOUR NAME, pointing with sweeping gesture across namecards.

Ramona responds: HERE I AM, PANCHO. Ramona picks up her card. Responds HERE IS MY NAME. RAMONA IS MY NAME.

Same game and dialogue interchange between puppet and individual children.

Ramona puts on her name tag. A new name tag is put in empty space. Pancho picks up a new name tag. Reads it: reads name of child, "X". Then he says: COME HERE, X. SHOW ME YOUR NAME. Child X comes up, takes her name tag.

Pancho reads: X

X responds: HERE I AM

Pancho: GOOD. COME HERE, X. SHOW ME YOUR NAME.

X responds as he picks up his card: HERE IS MY NAME, X IS MY NAME.

Pancho: YES, HERE IS YOUR NAME. X IS YOUR NAME.

If children need to be prompted, they should be prompted by the teacher, not the puppet.

III. CLOSING:Song S-102

Teacher teaches song line by line.

Teacher continues to act out the phrase A WARM EMBRACE I LEAVE YOU; (first with children that have been absent). Teacher reinforces GOOD BYE and UNTIL TOMORROW and makes sure children connect the spoken patterns with the text of the song.

Song S-101OPENING:

Good morning song. The second time around, teacher calls on two children to stand by her side, one on each side, and sing the Good Morning Song with her. Second teacher present in the classroom should keep a list of children who are called on to sing the song, indicating whether the child appears to know the song well enough or needs help with it. (by a check mark)

This lesson should be now a thorough, fairly rapid review in choral form and in individual form of the patterns introduced in the first three lessons. The manner in which the patterns were introduced should be adhered to as much as possible so that the situation is evoked together with the review of the pattern drill. The general procedure should be model, choral response, individual response, reinforced by choral response, followed by one or two additional individual responses. As many individual children should be involved in as many patterns as possible. Ideally each child should answer each pattern once. The teacher should not dwell on errors, but should move on to another child for correct response. If this is not achieved, the original modelling should be reenacted. Teacher and classroom teacher should keep note of weak patterns needing more reviewing.

II. ACTIVITY: ROLL CALL"Where is Thumkin?" S-103

Teacher demonstrates model response with puppets P1 and P2.

Teacher: PANCHO!

Pancho: HERE I AM.

Teacher: PANCHO IS HERE.

Teacher repeats same with Ramona.

Teacher acts out roll call with individual children - calling all children if possible. Teacher prompts each child to respond.

Teacher elicits class response of X IS ABSENT where applicable.

Teacher introduces song to class acting it out with her thumb. This can be done either with a finger puppet on the thumb or by a handkerchief or small scarf tied around the thumb with eyes and mouth painted on thumb with washable felt pen or ink or crayons. Children repeat song, using their thumbs with or without finger puppets. Teacher should remember that this song consists of two sections, and that there should be a definite break so the children are aware of dialogue (conversation).

III. CLOSING:Song S-102

Good bye song. Teacher may wish to sing this song line by line again. If this is not necessary, she listens to class response and prompts individual emphasis. Review patterns of GOOD BYE, GOOD BYE CHILDREN, UNTIL TOMORROW with puppets and teacher.

The main activity of this lesson is to review the second half of this preliminary unit's patterns, lessons 4-6, picking up also the weaker patterns reviewed the previous day. Again the same procedure should be used evoking the activity situation in which the patterns were originally presented, of course, on a more limited scale in name tag distribution, etc, which is now done en masse but on an individual basis. Teacher prompts children as necessary, reviewing particularly newer patterns.

II. ACTIVITY: "Thumkin Song" S-103

Continuation of the Thumkin song, the same as the previous day. Repeat song two or three times. Line by line teaching may be necessary. Teacher teaches it as dialogue.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 101: PAUL & JUDY

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT:

Kunhardt, Dorothy. Paul and Judy
Golden Press, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 101-1 through 101-7).
2. To allow children to participate orally, both in listening to an oral presentation and in assisting with the oral presentation.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and follow the commands called for by the various frames of the story.
4. To develop a feeling of "success" because they "can do many things".
5. To gain first experience with literature which depends upon consistent repetition as a primary literary device; to allow the children to have an enjoyable first experience with literature.
6. To make a connection from the basic story to the related story songs and activities.
7. To be able to sing the related story songs, either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This story has been translated into 29 different languages, ample proof of the universal appeal which it has to children all over the world, children who may come from different homes, cultures, social classes.

The Paul and Judy sequence (ST-1) is a basic story of "success" which every child can have because it "can do many things". In addition to seeing (Giant Book illustrations) and hearing (listening to repetitive language patterns) two additional senses (touch and smell) are used to permit each child to be successful no matter what his language competency might be, or irrespective of his being in a non-verbal or verbal stage.

"Paul and Judy" are suggested as the first unit of the Language-Through-Literature curriculum, because this story forms a foundation for many, perhaps all units to come. The experience of being able to do things successfully through touch reappears again in some of the activities of the Muffin unit (Unit U-102) and the use of taste in the Carrot Seed unit (Unit U-109) completes the list of senses already employed in the Paul and Judy activities.

The strong rhythmic appeal of the consistently structured Paul and Judy story lays the foundation for similar literature presentations and language acquisition activities in all units to follow.

Because of the consistent use and repetition of words, structures and situations, it is expected that already in this first literary unit children will perceive the function of repetition in good literature for children. Consistently, the "can do" statement of what Paul and Judy can accomplish (for example, "can touch Mother's hair") is followed by a command statement that "you can do" the same thing.

ESL - Suggestions: The teacher using the Language-Through-Literature program as an ESL program for children to whom English is a second language, will be interested to know that the consistent use of the "can do" pattern presents considerable language learning advantages:

1. It avoids the necessity of handling third person inflectional endings, and it therefore avoids the inconsistency of such an approach. Instead of "touches" and "smells" (two structures linguistically quite different from each other and from other than third person verb forms) the language learner consistently remains with the identical pattern of "can touch" and "can smell".
2. The various command forms ("touch", "smell") are easily recognized by the language learner because the word forms again remain the same as those used in the statements "Judy can touch" and "Paul can smell".
3. The consistent use of the "can do" pattern makes it possible to expand story presentations and story activities by using the question technique without introducing linguistically new structures. Instead of having to introduce the "do" or "does" structure of a question ("Do you touch?" or "Does Judy touch?") a simple word order change (without change in the structure) accomplishes the same thing: "Can you touch?" or "Can Judy touch?".

The teacher should remain consistent in the usage of the language throughout this entire first unit. First, this appeals to a very basic rhythmic sense of the young child. Second, consistent repetition facilitates skill learning and expands memory. Third, consistent repetition is an all important structural device in language acquisition.

Literature Presentation: Observe the suggestions contained in the general introduction to the Language-Through-Literature program with regard to presenting the story entirely from memory; to be able to handle the story related songs with complete ease from memory, preferable in more than just one language; to have available the necessary supportive realia (Giant Book, easel, etc.) to insure a worthwhile story telling activity.

The pace of any presentation of activity should be adapted to meet the needs of the children. A basic unit such as "Paul and Judy" may need to be followed exactly according to the suggested daily lesson plans with a certain group of children, while with another group of children it may well be presented at a more rapid pace, and perhaps in a shorter span of time.

Language Explorations: In addition to the obvious task of learning a second language (be it English as a second language, Spanish or Chinese as a second language, etc.) every young child is basically a language learner even in his very first (native) language. Some specific work with vocabulary items will be desirable. Young children are most curious about the meanings and the sounds of words especially as they represent new concepts. Here are a few items which will perhaps represent new experiences to many children:

Furry (the rabbit's skin)

Soft (Mother's hair, the rabbit's skin)

Scratchy (Father's face)

Sweet (the smell of flowers)

Giant Book Preparation: The Paul & Judy Giant Book is more than a "visual". In addition to providing communication through sight, it offers the pupils an opportunity to derive meaning from touch and smell. Special care should therefore be taken in the preparation of this book and the following extra comments are in order:

Frame # 3: Use blue oaktag for the bunny cut out.

Then put underneath a rabbit's skin. It can be obtained from furrier supply shops, etc. It must convey the meaning of "soft", "furry", etc.

A piece of sandpaper conveys the meaning of a new concept ("scratchy") simultaneously with language acquisition.

Frame # 5: Glue a handkerchief along its upper edge over the boy's face so that it can be lifted easily when the children play peek-a-boo.

Frame # 7: Put drops of perfume (eau de cologne, etc.) onto this picture. The smell will last for several months, perhaps a year.

Frame # 9: Use tinfoil (aluminum wrap) to make the mirror.

Frame # 11: Use a piece of sandpaper for the "scratchy" face.

Frame # 15: Use hair from a high quality doll to represent "Mommy's hair".

Frame # 17: Again, use rabbit's skin on this illustration; the page should be identical fo Frame # 3.

Children relate their feelings about the Bilingual Program with audio-visual creations of their own. Here is one child's impression of Paul and Judy" (Unit 101)

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 102: MUFFIN

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT:

Wise Brown, Margaret. Noisy Book
Harper and Row, Inc., New York, N. Y.

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 102-1 through 102-10).
2. To perceive and identify aurally the sounds of animals and machines.
3. To produce orally (imitate) the sounds made by animals and machines.
4. To perceive and identify aurally the sounds of musical instruments.
5. To perceive and identify by touch (without seeing or hearing) objects, animals, etc. from the child's surroundings.
6. To make a connection from perceiving the sounds or the feel of items in the story to perceiving other things surrounding a human being, by means of "hearing" or "touching".
7. To be able to sing the related story songs, either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

The text of the Muffin sequence represents a considerable departure from the original "Noisy Book" inasmuch as the language used is consistently patterned. Again, the Muffin unit, similar to Paul and Judy (U-101) attempts to open the pupil's perception by employing senses other than visual, particularly the sense of "listening" and the sense of "touch".

There is consistent repetition of words, structures and situations. Care should be taken to coordinate properly the recorded sound effects with the Giant Book illustrations. The sequence should be as follows:

1. Teacher says: "What can Muffin hear now?" Simultaneously a "blank page" (no illustration) must be open in the book.
2. Teacher plays sound effect from tape recorder. (No illustration appears in book).
3. Teacher says: "Yes, Muffin can hear . . .", and simultaneously turns page to show illustration of the animal (or thing) which has made the "sound".

"Can you hear

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 104: FALLING LEAVES

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Bancroft, Henriette, Down Come The Leaves
Thomas Y Crowell Co., New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 104-1 through 104-9).
2. To perceive, identify and produce the motions of walking, falling, jumping, running and blowing.
3. To perceive, identify and produce the colors of green, red, yellow, and brown.
4. To be able to sing the related story songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

The language patterns of the Falling Leaves sequence represent a considerable departure from the original literary reference text inasmuch as they are consistently organized and repeated.

In this unit, the pupil's perception is directed toward recognizing "motion" such as walking, falling, jumping, running, etc. In addition, colors of red, green, yellow and brown are introduced.

Care should be taken to expose the children to the colors as they are being introduced, not only through "paper leaves" but if possible through actual leaves collected in the woods.

Real fall leaves in appropriate colors should be used when making up the Giant Book.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 105: INDIAN TWO FEET AND HIS HORSE

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Friskey, Margaret, Indian Two Feet
Children's Press, Chicago, Ill.

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 105-1 through 105-12).
2. To understand the Indian Two Feet story and to be able to follow it sequentially, both through comprehension and eventually through retelling.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and story related games, particularly by recognizing, imitating and creating the actions of walking, dancing, the beating of the drum, riding, looking, painting, etc.
4. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.
5. To make a connection from the basic story to the related story songs and activities.
6. To perceive the idea of numbers and to develop a readiness for recognizing and creating a consecutive count (some children perhaps to the count of ten, others to the count of three only).

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

The text of this unit follows the literary reference text fairly closely.

Like the previous unit, the Indian Two Feet sequence introduces further action words and activities such as dancing, riding, etc. In addition, the children are introduced to number concepts, first through a song (Ten Little Indians), and subsequently through the use of the drum where number sequences are "pounded out".

When introducing the children to the concept of numbers, the teacher will notice a great difference in readiness between the pupils. Some will be able to count to ten almost from the beginning, while others may be able to go no further than perhaps to the number two or three. It should also be noted that it will be easier for the children to "recognize" a certain limited number of drum beats (let's say three beats as number three) than to create a definite number of beats on the drum (if, for instance, they would like to call "three friends", each of them represented by one beat). No efforts should be made at this point to introduce any type of addition or subtraction into these activities unless the children themselves indicate readiness for it.

" . . . and the horse finds him (her). "

Teacher tells story using gestures and pointing to pictures.
- C. Native teacher may, if desired, ask comprehension question: WHAT WOULD INDIAN TWO FEET LIKE TO HAVE? (a horse). (Do not ask this in English, however.)

Teacher reinforces comprehension; by turning to appropriate pictures in story, and demonstrating: HE CAN WALK

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 106: THE CLIMBING TREE

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Steiner, Charlotte; Burlingham, Mary. The Climbing Tree
Vanguard Press, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 106-1 through 106-17).
2. To participate in the story both through listening/comprehension and partially oral presentation of the story.
3. To participate in the activities of the story and story related themes.
4. To be able to sing the related story songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This holiday story is a tale about curiosity, effort, success and surprise. The story is fairly lengthy in its content and should therefore be presented to the children on two successive days (see Daily Lesson Plans). The story re-introduces the children to story characters which they have met before such as the bunny, the cat, the bird and the horse. In addition, several new vocabulary words are also introduced.

It should not be expected that the children can re-tell the story in exact sequence as far as the various encounters with the different story friends are concerned. The sequential development of the story should be understood, however, to the extent that the children realize that first comes the "climbing up", then comes the meeting "up on top", and finally the "climbing down" with the surprise ending at the very end.

Care should be taken that the realia are so selected that they lend themselves easily to trimming of the tree which is the final climax of the unit.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 107: SNOWY DAY

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Keats, Ezra Jack. Snowy Day
Viking Press, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 107-1 through 107-10)
2. To allow children to participate orally, both in listening to the oral presentation and in telling/re-telling the oral presentations.
3. To allow children to understand the sequence of the story and be able to relate orally or through dramatizations the sequence of the story in proper order (i. e., getting up in the morning, getting dressed, going out into the snow to play, coming back home, going back to bed).
4. To perceive the activities of the story character and to imitate and create these activities (i. e., walking, jumping, running, climbing up and coming down.)
5. To make the connection from the basic story to the related story songs and activities.
6. To be able to sing the related story songs, either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

The Language-Through-Literature version of this unit differs considerably from the literary reference text by its consistent repetition of linguistic patterns, and also by re-introducing into the story some of the animal friends from previous units.

It should be noted that in this story the children are again meeting a number of their animal friends from previous story units - - the cat, dog, horse and bunny.

In addition to the already familiar activities of walking, jumping, and running, the children are introduced to two, perhaps new concepts: "climbing up" and "coming down". The teacher might wish to expand on the concept of "up" and "down", and perhaps introduce other similar contrastive concepts such as "above" and "below", or "inside" and "outside".

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 108: LITTLE BEAR

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Minarik, Elsie Holmeslund. Little Bear
Harper & Brothers, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 108-1 through 108-11).
2. To understand the Little Bear story and to be able to follow it sequentially, both through comprehension and eventually through retelling.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and story related games, particularly by recognizing and doing the actions of "putting on" certain items of clothing.
4. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.
5. To perceive the concepts of "being cold" and of "being warm" (not being cold).

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This unit follows very closely the original reference text in its linguistic patterning.

It is hoped that the children will be introduced to the subtle humor in the ending of this story (Little Bear's own fur coat keeps him warm, while the extra pieces of clothing do not).

During the story related activities, the connection from the Snowy Day unit to the Little Bear unit should be made by re-introducing activities as well as songs from the Snowy Day unit into the Little Bear situation: walking, jumping, running, etc. in the snow.

The Little Bear sequence should be utilized to develop in the children self-sufficiency in terms of "dressing" and "undressing" (hat, coat, etc.).

"I am cold. I want something to put on."

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 109: THE CARROT SEED

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Krauss, Ruth. Carrot Seed
Harper & Brothers, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 109-1 through 109-8).
2. To allow children to participate orally, both in listening to the oral presentation and telling/retelling the oral presentation.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story.
4. To be able to retell the story sequentially.
5. To be able to sing the related story songs, either chorally or individually.
6. To make the connection from the basic story to the related story songs and activities.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This unit follows closely the original reference text.

The Carrot Seed story is a basic tale of "success". More specifically it is the story of a little boy who, through perseverance and steady effort, achieves the almost impossible. And, what's more, he does it against all the good advice from the adult world who does not believe that the "almost impossible" could happen.

If possible, the children should have the opportunity to see and touch an actual "bunch of carrots" complete with the green leaves. These can perhaps be obtained from a vegetable store (not a supermarket). The creative teacher will connect from the Carrot Seed story to actual classroom activities in the spring such as the planting and growing of various vegetables and perhaps flowers.

Excellent recordings of this story and songs are available commercially on phonograph records. They should be used as supplementary materials.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 110: THE EGG

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Wise Brown, Margaret. Golden Egg Book
Simon & Schuster, Inc., New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 110-1 through 110-12).
2. To understand The Egg story and to be able to follow it sequentially, both through comprehension and through retelling.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and story related games, particularly by recognizing and doing the actions of shaking, pushing, throwing and jumping.
4. To be able to recognize the colors of red, blue, yellow, black and white, and to produce these colors when requested to do so.
5. To recognize the mixed colors of green, orange, pink, grey and purple.
6. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This unit differs considerably from the original reference text in its linguistic patterning.

In addition to the many language patterns and vocabulary items contained in this story, this Easter unit lends itself well to a great many classroom activities.

While children can be expected to recognize and perhaps reproduce such colors as red, blue, yellow, etc., it should not be expected of them to be able to produce mixed colors such as green by putting blue and yellow together. They should be able to recognize these colors (green, orange, pink, etc.), but not necessarily know what "mix" produces them.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 111: NOBODY LISTENS TO ANDREW

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Guilfoils, Elizabeth. Nobody Listens to Andrew
Follet Publishing Company, Chicago, Illinois

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 111-1 through 111-13).
2. To understand the Andrew story and to be able to follow it sequentially, both through comprehension and eventually through retelling.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and story related games.
4. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This unit follows rather closely the original reference text.

The story of Andrew is the tale of a boy who has something important to say but nobody wants to listen because everybody is "too busy". The story also conveys the thought that nobody, not even an adult, is too grown-up to benefit from a mistake.

The bear which is found in Andrew's bed and which eventually is taken to the zoo, provides the "connection" between this unit and unit 113 (The Zoo).

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 112: THE LITTLE TOY TRAIN

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Piper, Walter (retold by). Little Engine That Could Platt & Munk Company, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 112-1 through 112-13).
2. To understand the story and to be able to follow it sequentially both through comprehension and eventually through retelling.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story and story related games.
4. To make the connection from "effort and cooperation" to "success".
5. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

The linguistic pattern of this unit differs considerably from the original reference text.

"The Little Engine That Could" tells the story of effort and cooperation and how it can lead to success and create happiness. It also tells the story of how lack of cooperation and selfishness creates unhappiness.

An excellent phonograph record on this story is available commercially. It should be used as supplementary material.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIT 113: THE ZOO

LITERARY REFERENCE TEXT

Rey, H. A. Feed the Animals

Houghton Mifflin Company, New York, New York

OBJECTIVES

1. To comprehend and produce the major language patterns of the unit (Daily Lesson Plans 113-1 through 113-16).
2. To understand the Zoo story and to be able to make the connection from the zoo animals to the type of food which they eat.
3. To be able to participate in the activities of the story, especially the guessing feature, and story related games.
4. To be able to understand and act out the commands of the various song activities.
5. To be able to sing the story related songs either chorally or individually.

BACKGROUND AND SUGGESTIONS

This story is presented entirely in rhyme. It is, in effect, a "guessing game" for the participating children.

It is important that the rhymed verses of this story are memorized and presented with ease. Coordination between the opening of the "flap" and the verse is important. A taped version of the story rhymes is entirely suitable.

In introducing the story the connection should be made from the "Nobody Listens to Andrew" unit to the Zoo story. (See Daily Lesson Plan number 113-1-A).

A considerable number of songs are connected with this story unit. They should be presented, acted out, and learned well.

Suggestions on how to prepare the Giant Book with the special "flaps" may be found on the next page.

PROGRAM ADDENDA

Sample ESL Lessons
Unit Tests

Sample ESL Lessons

The ten sample ESL lessons provided as part of the Language-Through-Literature Program, should demonstrate to the teacher how basic ESL structures and vocabulary items taken from the literary story units, can be combined so that the actual "drill" of the language lesson becomes more meaningful and motivating.

The sample lessons can be used in conjunction with any of the literary story units. However, some lessons will refer more specifically to a specific literary unit than others. For example, ESL Lesson 303 and ESL Lesson 309, which use "parts of the body" as vocabulary items, can be used more meaningfully at the time when the Touch Song (Song No. S-1) has been taught. Or, ESL Lesson 304 and ESL Lesson 306 (which use "colors" as vocabulary items) can be related more meaningfully to the Leaves Story (Unit 104) and/or the Egg Story (Unit 110) since it is here that colors are being introduced and used throughout the entire sequence.

ESL Lesson 307 which uses animals as vocabulary items, could be related meaningfully to the Snowy Day Story (Unit 107) or the Zoo Story (Unit 113).

The ESL teacher should be well versed in the use of puppets since this is an important technique which can strongly motivate children of young ages.

Visuals form an integral part of these sample ESL lessons.

The teacher will best prepare these visuals on stiff cardboard, perhaps 8 1/2" by 11" in size. All comments pertaining to the requirements of good visuals (as discussed in the General Introduction to the Language-Through-Literature Program) also apply here: The visuals must be meaningful and telling, simple, and any superfluous items which could distract or even mislead the student, should be eliminated. The visuals must be prepared and stacked up in proper sequence so that the rhythm of the lesson is not lost because of some manipulation difficulty. This is particularly important if the lesson is presented from pre-recorded tape. The teacher (or student-helper) who manipulates the visuals must retain exact coordination with the programmed lesson.

It should be noted that at all times a "student response" is followed by "teacher confirmation". The student response, where appropriate, is indicated on the scripts through two brackets like this: (____).

UNIT TESTS INTRODUCTION

Since the Language-Through-Literature Program can serve a variety of language purposes (native language development, second language learning in English, Spanish, Chinese or other language) the teacher will wish to check on the comprehension and speaking achievements of her pupils according to the setting in which the program operates.

In addition, it should also be possible to check on the children's progress in some of the other areas of the Language-Through-Literature Program such as story comprehension, sequential development of the story, meaning and interpretation, and of course some of the general "readiness" activities of Early Childhood. The Unit Tests which follow are designed to serve as samples for the teacher to show how some of these areas could be tested even at a time when children are not yet able to read.

Indirectly, of course, any test - no matter what its content - also tests a child's capability to "comprehend" (to understand either oral instructions or written instructions). If the tests are given in a language other than English, the translator must therefore take care to present the instructions in such a manner that no comprehension difficulties are encountered by the pupils otherwise the tests will not measure what they are supposed to.

Paul and Judy: Worksheet

Oral Instruction

Look at your paper, there are some pictures.

Here, in the first picture (point to it), there is a boy. It's Paul.

Paul can smell the flowers.

Now, look at the other two pictures on the same line. There are flowers too. The flowers in one picture look almost the same as the flowers that Paul can smell. Find that picture and circle it.

Good. Now, point to the first picture and say, "Paul can smell the flowers." And then point to the picture with a circle and say, "I can smell the flowers." Say it again, "I can smell the flowers."

Let's look at the first picture on the second line (point to it). There is a girl and a mirror. It's Judy. Judy can look in the mirror.
